Kinmount Fair cancelled in 150th year

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

With 14 weeks to go until its 150th anniversary, the 2020 Kinmount Fair has been cancelled.

The Kinmount Fair Board announced the decision on May 25. The 150th fair was to be held Labour Day weekend, Sept. 4 to Sept. 6.

"With the current public health restrictions in place it is not possible to plan and make preparations as we normally would for the variety of shows at the fair," reads a message from the fair board posted on the morning of May 25 to their website and social media page. "Added to that issue is the difficulty to manage social distancing for an event the size of the fair."

The three-day fair typically includes agriculture and equestrian shows, live entertainment, a midway, demolition derby and historical exhibitions and is attended by thousands of people, many who travel to the area to attend.

"The most important thing now is the health and safety of everyone who makes Kinmount Fair what it is – our workers, volunteers, vendors and attendees – so we believe that this is the best decision," reads the fair board's message.

"Tough call, but the right one," said Craig Schroter of Lindsay on the Fair's Facebook page. "In 51 years, I had only missed the fair in 1985. This will be the second miss. See you all in 2021!"

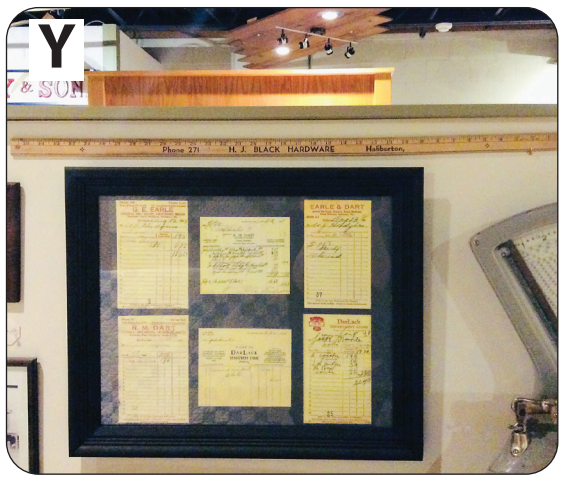
Campers who have prepaid for the 2020 Kinmount Fair have two options, according to a message on the Kinmount Fair site. Campers may request a refund of their prepayment, or they may move their prepayment forward to the 2021 fair. The trailer park where camping takes place can be reached at trailerpark@kinmountfair.net. According to the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies Ontario Fairs' web site, Ontario hosts more than 214 yearly fairs. A listing of fairs in Ontario from May through October shows most have been cancelled or postponed until next year, while some, such as the Hanover Fair and Hymers Fall Fair in Kakabeka Falls, are being held virtually, organizing challenges like a fair exhibit online to showcase photos of hobbies or crafts.

In its long history, the Kinmount Fair has faced setbacks before – during the Great Depression in the 1930s, the fair remained active but finding prize money was challenging and one year the secretary was gifted with a quilt instead of a cash honorarium, according to a 2009 issue of the Kinmount Gazette. Though this year's cancellation was heartbreaking for organizers and annual fairgoers, the plan for a 2021 fair is in the works.

"Please be assured that we will be back in 2021 for our 150th anniversary celebrations," said the Kinmount Fair board directors' message. "In the coming months we are going to work on planning for a 2021 Kinmount Fair where we can all celebrate our favourite fall fair together safely. See you in 2021."

The 150th Kinmount Fair is scheduled to take place Sept. 3, 4 and 5, 2021.

This photo of the Kinmount Fair is one of the earliest known to exist - it was likely taken in 1905. /Submitted by Guy Scott



Y is for Yard Stick. This one comes from the hardware store at the corner of Highland and Maple when it was run by Harold Black in the 1950's. Earlier, when he ran it in partnership with Russell Dart, it was known by the clever name of DarLack's!

Z is for Zeph, our nickname for the Sidehill Gouger. A local legendary creature, he was said to look like a wild boar, but with wings and horns...and legs shorter on one side of his body than the other, because he lived on the side of a hill!

Examining Haliburton's historic buildings

All photos submitted by Kate Butler, Haliburton Highlands Museum

KATE BUTLER
Haliburton Highlands Museum

The Haliburton Highlands Museum recently celebrated businesses in the community by sharing some historical shots of the village's downtown online. "Don't forget, even in these unusual times, to support local businesses in whatever way you can," said an April 20 social media post.

Main street

Prust building

English-born William Prust arrived in Haliburton in 1874. After becoming settled in the village, he had this building at the corner of Highland and Maple constructed. It's served many uses over the years, including a brief stint in the 1890s standing in for the town hall and from 1906-1912 as home to the Sterling Bank of Canada. Today, it houses Castle Antiques, while the spot where the original residential wing would have been is occupied by Mixtape Vintage and Russell Red Records. At first glance, it's tricky to spot it as the same building, but there are elements of continuity there if you look for them!

Kellett's shop

Now, here's a view in the village that hasn't changed quite as much! The building that housed Charlie Kellett's shop on the southwest corner of Highland and Maple was constructed in the late 19th century. As well as being a shopkeeper, Kellett was also known as the owner of Haliburton's first motorcar - a Model T Ford. As you can see, there was originally a residence next to the shop, but it was torn down in 1940 to make way for the Molou Theatre. Today, this part of town is home to Algonquin Outfitters and Needful Things.

Dover's store

James Dover's store on the southeast corner of Highland and Maple was a bit of a one-stop shop. Born in England, Dover came to Haliburton the year of Confederation and had this shop and the adjoining house constructed in the early 187's. As well as being a shopkeeper, Dover was also local postmaster from 1888 to 1915 ... and the post office also then ran a savings bank program! The building was torn down in 1948 and the new premises for Curry Motors went up in its place. Curry Motors moved out to the highway 2006, but we think that the Rexall that's there today pays quite a tribute to the look of the old building, don't you?

Curry building

W.R. Curry came to Haliburton with his wife, Jessie, and their children in 1906. He purchased a livery business and began renting horses and wagons and providing passenger and freight service. As technology changed, Curry adapted, with the business eventually being known as the Curry Motors we know today. This lovely house, still standing at the corner of Highland and Pine was built as a residence for the Curry family in 1911. The building to the right of the house was the livery stable, built soon after.

Irwin-Boyd-Freeman

One of the oldest buildings still standing in the village is also one of the ones that has changed the least! This Pine Avenue landmark was erected in the early days of the community's development for James Irwin and Gardiner Boyd. By the 1880s, an Englishman named Frederick Freeman had come to manage their store and eventually took it over. Freeman's store was, not surprisingly, hugely popular with the children of the village who attended the school around the corner because of the great selection of penny candy he sold. Wondering what he looked like? He's the second one from the right in this pic.

Niven-Clarke house

Originally built in the 1880s as a home for Alexander and Maggie Niven, this lovely house with its spacious veranda had become the home of the Clarke family by the 1890s. Harry Clarke is shown here in the garden with his three daughters – Marjorie, Dorothy and Phyllis – as well as their governess, Miss Bain. No evidence of the house remains today, but it was right in the centre of the village. Where do you think you would have found it?

Here's the answer: the house stood at what's now 212 Highland Street – home to Lockside Trading! What an incredibly different look, isn't it?

IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR AGAIN!

Welcome to the Highlands Summer Festival Photo Contest

Each month we will be posting a photo from one of the shows we presented over the past two decades. The challenge for you is to identify the show and the year it was presented. There could be additional questions as well, depending on the whims of the contest master. All you have to do is submit your answers to contest@highlandssummerfestival.on.ca by the 25th of the month. We will select one winner from all the correct entries we received by deadline. The winner will receive two tickets to any of the 2021 season shows because, YES! there will be a season next year. A new photo will be posted at the beginning of each month at which time we'll announce the winner of the previous contest.
It is as simple as that.

- No entry fee
- No tickets to buy
- No meetings to attend

….just a nostalgic stroll down our theatre memory lane and a chance to score some tickets to the 2021 Highlands Summer Festival season.

So ... Let the Fun Begin!!!!

Contest #1

We're looking for the name of the show, the year it was presented and the names of the three actors, (not their characters, their real names), you see here. Bonus points to anyone who can describe the relationship between the three characters.

Send your entry by June 25 to:
contest@highlandssummerfestival.on.ca
Watch for the winner to be announced and the next contest in this location in early July. Good Luck!!!

The Sterling Bank building

This building has moved twice and has been used as a bank, a library and now a museum. In July 1907, the Sterling Bank of Canada purchased property and built this bank at the corner of Newcastle Street and Bobcaygeon Road. In 1925 it became the Standard Bank of Canada, which was taken over by the Canadian Bank of Commerce three years later. In 1958, the bank required larger facilities and this building was moved to Peck Street where it housed the public library. When the library was relocated to the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, the Sterling Bank was donated to the museum and became the first heritage building on the grounds of the Minden Hills Museum & Heritage Village when it opened in 1984.

Collection of Minden Hills Museum & Heritage Village (2009.20.1).

Dominion Hotel

The Dominion Hotel is the oldest surviving hotel and tavern in Haliburton County. It is also the oldest building on Minden's main street – having survived all three fires in the downtown core. Originally owned by Daniel Buck, an innkeeper who knew how to throw an epic shindig. In 1884, Pelham Mulvaney described Minden as a bit of a party town – do you think his words still hold true?

"There was a dance at Buck's hotel, Minden, which commenced on New Year's Eve, 1864, and lasted with slight intermissions, for four days and five nights. The population in those days was greatly addicted to dancing, and the festive meetings at Buck's were numerous. The same social characteristics still prevail, but the temperance sentiment is now sufficiently developed to have caused a great diminution in the number and duration of the dance meetings." Pelham Mulvaney, History of the county of Peterborough, 1884.

The Rockcliffe

Built in 1908 by Thomas Ranson, the building we know as the Rockcliffe Tavern was originally called Ranson House. In the 1920s it was sold and became the Valley View Inn. There was a tea room for ladies and separate entrances so men and women didn't mix.

Fires

This photo shows Postmaster Walter Welch and courier Richard Kirkwood displaying all that was saved from the post office: a pot-bellied stove, chair, post office sign and two mail bags. w/Collection of Minden Hills Museum & Heritage Village (2007.05.58)

Minden's main street was ravaged by fire three times. Little is known of the 1879 fire, but the entire south side of the street was destroyed in 1890. In 1942, the north side was wiped out in minutes by a fire that started in Brintnell's Bakery. This photo shows Postmaster Walter Welch and courier Richard Kirkwood displaying all that was saved from the post office: a pot-bellied stove, chair, post office sign and two mail bags.

Haliburton County Public Library At Home

Acrylic Dirty Flip Paint Pour

While our buildings might be closed, we still want you to be able to enjoy your public library. So, here at HCPL at Home we'll be giving you a maker project to try every week that you can make with things that you already have around the house, or that are easy to get locally.

If you end up making a project please post photos with the hashtag, #HCPLatHome, we would love to see what you create.

Supplies:

- PVA Glue
- Water
- Acrylic Paint
- Gesso (Optional)
- Plastic cups (8 oz)
- Craft sticks
- Latex gloves & Plastic Sheet (Optional)
- Treadmill silicone
- Butane blow torch (Or a hair dryer on low)
- Something to paint pour (canvas, records, clay pot)

Instructions:

First make the pouring medium using two parts of PVA glue to one part water and stir to mix. A recycled squeeze bottle works well to mix and store medium.

Now you are ready to mix your paint. The amount of paint used will vary with the size of your project. Add 1 cm of paint to a cup and mix an equal amount of the pouring medium into each and stir well with craft stick. Your paint should run off the stick in a continuous thread like warm honey. Do this for each of the colours you want to use. In total you should have enough paint to over half fill one of the cups.

Lastly, add about three drops of silicone to some of the cups.

Use additional cups as a stand to put your canvas/record on so that the excess paint will run off (push pins will work too).

Take a new cup and start pouring in some of the paint, some of each color until you have over half a cups of paint. Using a craft stick put it in the cup and draw a number 8. It's just to get the colours moved about in the cup. Take your canvas, put it upside down over the cup. Holding the cup and the back of the canvas flip it upside down and place on the stand. Wait a few seconds for the paint to run down the inside of the cup then lift the cup at a bit of an angle to break the seal. The paint will form a big circle in the middle of the canvas. Using the butane torch quickly run it over the paint to pop any bubbles and get the silicone doing its magic.

Now you need to tilt the canvas gently to spread the paint. Don't keep moving the paint about or you'll start mixing it and will get dirty colours. Tilt the canvas to one corner to let a bit of the paint run off, not too much as you will repeat this to reach all 4 corners. Using your finger scoop up some of the dripped paint and dab it on any corners or edges that may need it.

Put your item on what you are using for a stand and give it a final torching.

Let your item completely dry for a few days and once it is completely dry you could put a couple of coats varnish on to protect it and to pop those colors. Varnishing is optional as acrylic paints are waterproof once dry.

Orphaned Fawns

MONIKA MELICHAR
Special to County Life

WHAT A BEAUTIFUL sight it is to see a doe with a fawn by her side. It's even more heart warming if she has twins. Here in the Highlands we have a healthy population of these gentle spirits of the forest, and some become so acclimatized to human activity that you may even spot deer window-shopping in town!

During the months of May and June is when most of our local does give birth. We also receive many phone calls from people who come across a fawn that is all by itself.

During the first three weeks of a fawn's life, it is much too unstable on its long skinny legs to follow mom, so the doe instructs it to sit and stay, leaving it curled up and hidden among the foliage. At this age, the fawn has very little scent, and is so well camouflaged, that wolves, foxes and other predators may walk right past it, and not even know it was there.

The doe returns to feed the fawn only two to three times during the day, so the fawn must spend many hours all on its own.

So how can you tell if a fawn is truly orphaned and needs to be rescued?

A fawn that has been crying out or bawling, loudly and consistently for many hours, and the area is not overly busy with human or vehicular activity.

Rescue a fawn if it is critically injured, not with just scrapes and small cuts, as those heal quickly, but it had been hit by a vehicle or attacked and bitten.

A critical fawn will be lying flat on its side, with a dry nose and even drier mouth. It cannot stand up on its own, or stay upright even with your help. This is definitely a good reason to rescue it. A healthy fawn on the other hand would be bright-eyed and aware of your presence. It would be resting curled up with its legs nicely folded and tuck underneath. It can lift its head to look at you, or may keep it tucked in close to the body in hopes of not being discovered.

The most obvious reason to rescue a fawn is that the mother is definitely deceased. Now we know of cases where an orphaned fawn was adopted by another nursing doe, but this is not always the case and really too risky to attempt it.

Now, if a fawn is kidnapped or removed by accident, it can be re-united with its mother as long as it is returned and left in the same location as it was found. A doe will frantically search for her fawn for at least two to three days before giving up. We have been very successful in re-uniting fawns, especially if it is within a day or two.

There is nothing sweeter than spotting a little fawn laying quietly in the tall grasses. Take a look but keep your distance and let these gentle little spirit of the forest grow up to be wild and free.

But if you need assistance, or have a concern, please call the sanctuary. We are always here to help.

Monika Melichar runs the Woodlands Wildlife Sanctuary in Minden Hills, a volunteer-based charity that rehabilitates and releases sick, orphaned and injured wildlife back into the wild. To find out more about the sanctuary, go to woodlandswildlifesanctuary. ca.

Top 10 things people have said before giving up on a bad idea

FOR EVERY great idea, there are countless ones that have failed. And sometimes just before that happens, somebody says something that should be remembered but isn't. Here are my top 10 favourite things people have probably said before giving up on an idea.

1. If you like square dancing, you'll love rectangle dancing.
2. I don't see any reason why you can't attach that bungee cord to your gym shorts. Now jump!
3. They're allowed to score with headers in soccer, why can't we do that in major league baseball?
4. You know, I bet you this saddle will fit that mountain lion!
5. How about a series of algebra based first-person shooter games?
6. I'm pretty sure clarinet rock will be the next big thing.
7. Trust me, neck ties and giraffes are a match made in heaven.
8. If you're serious about making NASCAR safer, just install crosswalks.
9. What kid wouldn't want a kale-based candy?
10. Yes sir, indoor beekeeping is the next big thing.

Unfurling

Breeze teasing this brittle Spring, flinging crows wings across a crumpled Sky,
smearing bird song through the branches of trees, luring buds to erupt into leaves, unfurling like tiny claws, pawing Air,
these embryonic leaves, sealed in layer upon layer of green, bursting through the bark of twigs,
in places where it seems there is no space left for buds to sprout, yet the twigs make room for them to bloom,
new growth springing from the crook of two twigs,
sprigs shooting from a branch, that last week looked barren, now flourishing with the promise of fresh growth.
My feet stutter along the trail, backtracking every few steps, as I catch my breath, that's snatched by the beauty of what I see,
my eyes swimming in these ripples of green, buds frothing along the twigs of bushes that flank the trail,
in varying stages of bloom,
some buds, so tiny, they barely make a bump beneath the twig's skin, still sheathed in a hard shell, to protect the tenderness of what sleeps beneath, these kernels of future leaves, that I don't dare disturb, for fear of revealing too soon what still needs to be concealed,
my fingers touching the twigs instead,
marvelling at the life that brings within them, birthing bushes and branches that will house birds and butterflies, the flutter of something to look forward to, quickening my Breath, lightening my steps, as I ramble along the trail, passing budding bushes and branches of trees, cupping a cluster of tiny pinecones in my palm,
as they nest in their branch,
fragile as robin's eggs that haven't hatched,
so I leave them to be, to marinate in the stream of breeze, Sky releasing seeds of Rain, bathing Air in waves of green, seeping deep into the earth and roots of trees, unfurling leaves curled in sleep, steeping them in the feeling of their own Awakening.

Kinmount house a reminder of town's prosperous history

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

The Hopkins house, on Dickson Street in Kinmount, was built in the 1880s and home to local merchants. It is still surrounded by a wrought iron and concrete fence initially placed in the late 19th century. /Submitted by Guy Scott

When he was growing up as a kid in the '60s, Guy Scott used to live next to a house in Kinmount known as the Hopkins House.

"I lived for awhile on one side of it and I lived for awhile on the other side of it," he laughs.

The house, a beautiful red brick building on Dickson Street, was built in the 1880s by Alexander Watson, a local businessman who married Scott's grandfather's aunt, Maude. According to information from the Kinmount web site included in the Kinmount Historical Walking Tour pamphlet, the wrought iron and concrete fencing that surrounds the building is original, initially placed in the late 19th century.

"That was likely the fanciest home in town, at least the fanciest brick home," said Scott. "There was a lot of wood, because all you did was walk to the sawmill and you could get whatever you needed. So a lot of buildings in wood."

Scott said he imagines the brick used to build the house in a time in which many homes were wooden would likely have come from brickyards in Lindsay, loaded onto the trains there and brought right into town.

"Kinmount was just a sleepy little village, I think it was less than 50 people, then they surveyed the railway line right through downtown and, oh boy," said Scott. "It went from 50 to 500 in about two years. They started building the big stores and of course they burnt over and over and over again. Just in the past two years I found two or three fires that I never knew happened."

Watson himself was a merchant, with a store located where the post office is now.

"The Watsons had a big store in Lindsay and the sons went out and had satellite stores in the various communities," said Scott, a local historian. "In 1880, Kinmount was, well it was a prosperous place, wow, it was one of the big stores."

Scott said like most stores in the day, the Watsons ran a general store, which he said specialized in fabrics, more a clothing store than a grocery store.

"They had some bad luck, their store was burnt four times in 10 years," he said. "They literally just went bankrupt because of that and moved away. About 1904, '05 somewhere in there. Another family, the Hopkins family, bought it." And then, laughing: "My great-grandmother was a Hopkins, we're all related."

The Hopkins were also shopkeepers.

"They owned the big store, they were merchants too, they owned the big store right at the corner of the bridge in Kinmount, this massive place, the biggest building in Kinmount," said Scott. "The Hopkins had everything, four departments. They had groceries, they had clothing, they had hardware and they had a co-op, a cattle feed store."

The Hopkins lived in the big brick house on the corner the longest, that Scott knows.

"I can remember the last of them living there when I was a kid," he said.

Other sites of note in the Kinmount Historical Walking Tour are the Kinmount Railway Station, built in 1876, the Austin Sawmill built in 1942 on the same site as the original built in the 1890s, the old courthouse and jail first built in the 1890s and the Kinmount House Bed and Breakfast, recognized as being one of the oldest buildings in Kinmount though its date of construction is not known. Virtual Terry Fox Run prepares for 40th anniversary

County Life Staff

The Terry Fox Run is going virtual across Canada this year, fulfilling Fox's dream of the Marathon of Hope continuing despite his death in 1981. Andy Salvatori has stepped up to organize the Haliburton virtual run, while Barb Millington has done the same in Minden.

Minden's Terry Fox Run has been held from 1994 to 2019 raising a total of $319,024, while Haliburton has had a Terry Fox Run from 1981 to 2017, raising a total of $146,165 for The Terry Fox Foundation and cancer research.

Kim Smith, Ontario community events coordinator, said the events will be held Sept. 20, virtually with participants taking part in any way they can, from wherever they can safely while respecting current physical distancing recommendations during the COVID-19 crisis.

"In these uncertain times, the one certainty we have is that cancer is not waiting for COVID-19 to be over," Smith told County Life. "This year, Canadians will unite in spirit, not in person, for their own version of the Run on Sept. 20, 2020. 'Terry Fox Run 2020. One Day. Your Way.' Millions of Terry Foxers will continue to honour Terry, aided by new technology that will enhance the virtual participation experience by providing a way to 'get fundraising, get inspired and get fit.'"

In total, 205 organizers are involved in promoting Terry Fox Runs across Ontario, while 650 communities across Canada are hosting the first-ever virtual Terry Fox Run this year.

"The response from our volunteers has been that they are united still, they will honour Terry, we will remember him for his determination and indomitable spirit, and they are raring to go in their communities to share the news of the Virtual Terry Fox Run," said Smith. "We are stronger together, that's for sure!"

Terry Fox Runs have taken place in hundreds of communities, thousands of schools and by millions of supporters across Canada for 40 years. The decision to host the annual event virtually due to the spread of the novel coronavirus was announced to volunteers April 30.

"We are super thankful for all our volunteers and thank Barb and Andy for stepping up to the plate this year," said Smith.

Those interested in registering for the run can visit terryfox.org/run.

New initiative making a paws-itive impact on the community

ZACHARY ROMAN
County Life Staff

A new initiative called Puppy Paw's Pantry, started by local chef and mom Cheryl-Ann Haywood, is providing dog food free of charge to those in need amid the COVID-19 pandemic. Her service, which started on May 10, can be accessed discreetly and will deliver dry or wet dog food to your place of residence, no questions asked.

Haywood has bred Boston Terriers for 30 years, which has no doubt contributed to her passion for this project.

"I've always loved dogs and helping people," said Haywood. "This was a way for me to give back to the community, especially when families are facing financial hardships like never before."

Haywood said she has received a few donations already and has purchased lots of food herself to have when she is called upon. When it is safe to do so, Haywood wants to approach the pet stores in the community as well.

"I believe the best way to help in these times is to be kind and think of others," said Haywood. "Good deeds can change someone's life."

Haywood said that the reaction from community members and friends to Puppy Paw's Pantry has been overwhelmingly positive. She plans to run the initiative for as long as there is a need for it and she is physically and financially able to.

"My mission is to help families keep their dogs and not have the dogs be surrendered to rescues due to financial hardships," said Haywood. "Families facing hard times should not have to choose to feed their dogs or their children."

If you would like to make a donation to Puppy Paw's Pantry or use the service yourself, send an email to lovepuppypawspantry@gmail.com.

Keeping carts clean

Cashier Mandy Billings cleans a shopping cart after a customer was finished using it on Thursday, May 21 at the Wilberforce Foodland. The store's owner said safety measures have been continually added at the store since the province implemented the safety measures to reduce the spread of COVID-19. This includes pre-wrapped produce, a hand sanitizer station for customers, floor decals encouraging social distancing at the check-out, plexiglass barriers at the till, sanitizing carts and other high touch areas such as door handles to fridges, availability of masks and shields to staff, shopping carts only (instead of baskets) to encourage social distancing while shopping, and, in addition to cleaning carts after each use, a deep clean of shopping carts performed by a contractor, who uses a high pressure washer and commercial grade cleaning products every few weeks. /DARREN LUM Staff

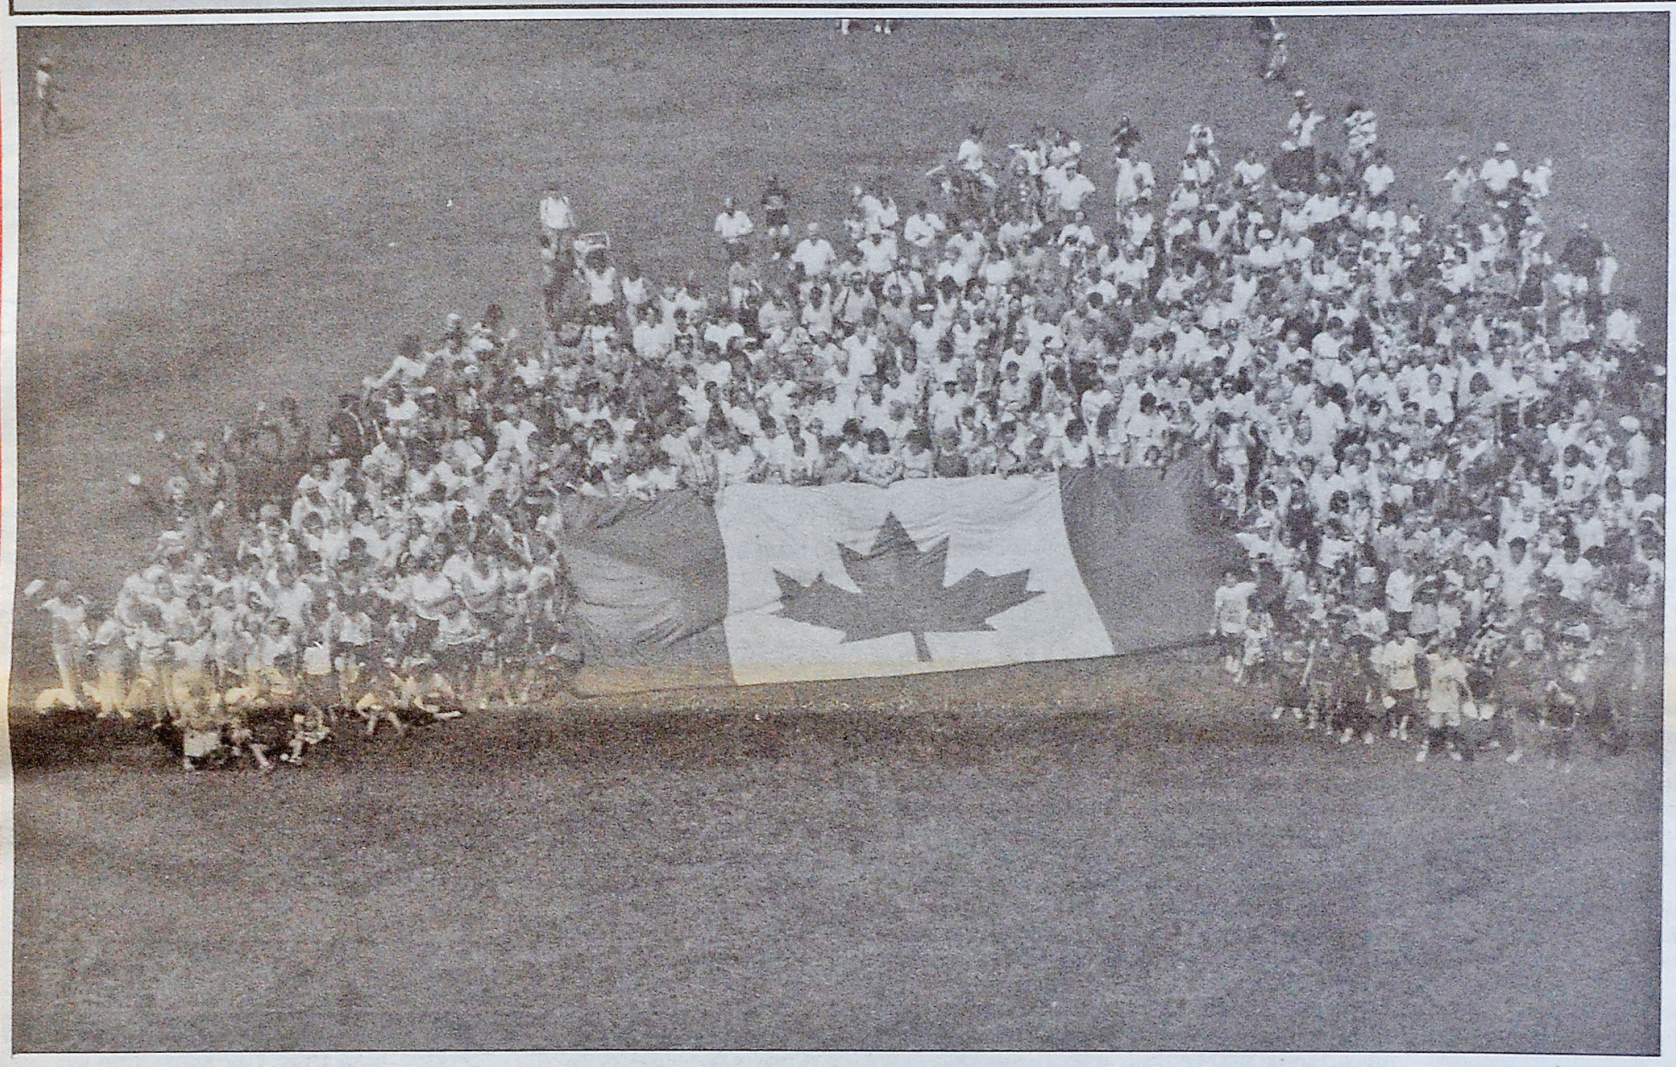
Minden throws a bash for Canada's 125th birthday



WASN'T THAT A PARTY?

Hundreds of people came out to the Fairgrounds on Sunday to take part in the community picnic celebrating Canada's 125th anniversary. Among the attractions were musical entertainers, dancers, a horseshoe tournament, tug-of-war, clowns, games, antique cars, food, a demonstration by the fire department, face painting and a huge birthday cake. In the midst of all the activity, the crowd still found time to pose for a patriotic group shot.

Drainville opposes Sunday shopping law

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Despite the wishes of local businesses and the provincial government, MPP Dennis Drainville says he will vote against changes to Sunday shopping legislation.

In an interview last week Drainville, who is a member of the New Democratic Party, said he does not agree with his party's decision to back-off on restricted Sunday shopping, a move which was prompted by public opinion.

"In the last three years polling figures have shown a complete turn around," he said. "There is much more of a demand for Sunday shopping and the government is trying to respond."

Drainville also said the government is trying to deal with the fact that legislation designed to restrict Sunday shopping has been difficult to enforce.

Last year the government introduced changes to the Retail Business Holidays Act which prohibited most stores from opening Sunday, except where municipalities pass by-laws permitting the operation of tourism-related businesses.

However Premier Bob Rae has been under increasing pressure from Ontario's business community to review the NDP's position and allow Sunday shopping.

Opening for business on Sunday was seen as a way to bolster the retail sector, which has suffered during the recession, and supporters claimed that Sunday shopping would decrease the number of Ontario residents who head south to shop in the United States.

Recently Rae announced that his government would reverse its earlier stand and would introduce changes to the legislature which would permit wide-open Sunday shopping, and that these changes would be put before a free vote by MPPs. Until the vote is taken, stores will be allowed to open on Sundays.

Free from party discipline, Drainville says he will vote against his government and against Sunday shopping.

"Quality of life means people are afforded the opportunity to have certain periods of time off work," he said. "I understand why the government is doing this, but I believe there has to be a stand taken."

Drainville supported the concept of a tourism exemption which would have allowed businesses in Haliburton County to remain open while other areas of the province would have to remain closed.

But even within areas operating under the tourism exemption, Drainville does not favour unrestricted business activity.

"In our riding there is no need for every shop to be open on Sunday," he said.

The date of the vote has not yet been announced and Drainville says the government may face some tough opposition to the bill, from its own party members.

"There is a quite a split in the party," he said. "This is not something which is going to pass without a problem."

Drainville believes the lobby for Sunday shopping has been back mostly by large chains and the Toronto media, which stands to gain from increased advertising revenue.

Faced with competitors opening their doors on Sundays, Drainville says small businesses will have tough time trying to stay closed.

THE SPRING BEAR HUNT IS BACK.

Hunters never give up. It took the OFAH 21 years; we took on the politicians, the courts, the media and anti-hunting groups, never giving up on the science, the economy and our heritage that absolutely needs Ontario's spring bear hunt.

Many OFAH supporters never even hunted spring bear before it was cancelled in 1999. They thought if a hunt gets canned based on misinformation and money, what outdoor tradition would propaganda threaten next? This is the reason they joined a hunting organization.

We are in this together.

The best way to celebrate the spring bear hunt is to belong to the OFAH. As always, anglers and hunters turn to Ontario OUT of DOORS Magazine for information, and they count on the OFAH for representation – plus members' insurance and great discounts.

The spring bear hunt is back, but the OFAH fight for anglers, hunters and gun owners is never over.

"The truth is, the spring bear hunt would still be nothing more than a footnote in Ontario's outdoors history, had it not been for the stubborn and steadfast efforts of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH)." — Steve Galea, Ontario OUT of DOORS.
